An Important Message from the Director of the Salvage Division of the War Production Board

Mr. Meat Dealer:

The need for used household fats is today greater than ever for military, industrial and essential civilian needs.

The Japanese have cut off one billion pounds of fats and oils from the Far East. Not until we recapture this territory and rebuild, replant and regain this tonnage, can we slacken our efforts.

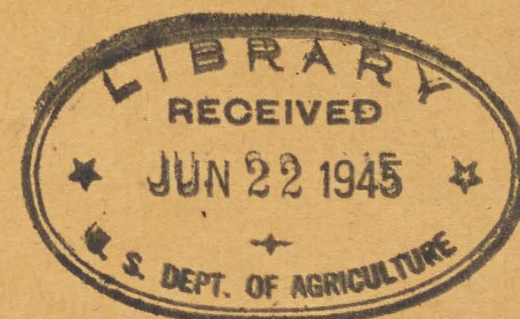

It is your patriotic duty, and that of your employees, to display this material at all times, and to continuously remind the housewife to save and bring into your store these fats which play such a vital part in winning this war.

It is only by such all-out effort on the part of everyone that we can sooner terminate the war and bring back home the boys for whom no trouble or sacrifice is too great.

May I take this occasion to express for the War Production Board our deep appreciation for the outstanding contribution you have already made to the war effort. The need for used household fats is so great that we must redouble our efforts to greatly increase our collections if we are to meet war and essential civilian requirements.

Sincerely,

H. M. Faust
H. M. FAUST, Director
